

OBJECTIVE

An adventurous investor is prepared to accept significant risk in pursuit of real returns ahead of inflation. As a result, they will recognise that this may result in high levels of volatility, that is, movements up and down over all timeframes. They will be prepared to accept this volatility due to their likely focus on growth. The risks relative to world equity markets will be typically between 80% and 110% although potentially it may move outside this range.

Q3/2018: MARKET AND PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY

Most equity markets continued to make progress in the period. The US was again the best performer, reflecting robust economic growth and a strong corporate earnings season. In contrast, UK Equities were weak.

Within the Adventurous Strategy, Japan equity has been reduced given the outlook for growth and valuation. Emerging market equity has increased, as the sector looks oversold and offers a long term opportunity to invest in fast growing economies with rising living standards, higher consumer spending and enhanced infrastructure investment.

During the current market volatility, we are retaining a long term perspective, investing in good quality funds whilst maintaining diversified portfolios.

INVESTMENT PROCESS

We utilise an active “top down, bottom up” approach to investing, where asset allocations and geographic apportioning are set in accordance to each specific risk mandate. We monitor economic, corporate and political influences worldwide to assess their impact on six principle asset classes: cash, bonds, equities, commodities, property and alternatives. The most attractive funds for each mandate are then selected using a proprietary WHIreland scoring system encompassing quantitative screening with a qualitative desk research overlay.

The investment process is managed by our Asset Allocation, FTSE 350 and Collectives Committees, with each being comprised of experienced market practitioners and research analysts from across the group. Our investment team contributes to the process for the Navigator Portfolio Service, ensuring a broad range of views are put forward.
